COLLECTION SUMMARY

The Sports Information Office Collection forms a portion of the Cradle of Coaches Archive and includes correspondence, newsletters, photographs, statistical data, membership data, memorabilia, and other Sports Information materials pertaining to the Cradle of Coaches. This collection is derived from desk files from the Miami University Sports Information Office.

This grouping contains an extensive collection of news clippings and magazine articles about the Cradle of Coaches, ranging from the late 1950s – 80s. The collection also contains manuscripts relating to the implementation of the Cradle of Coaches Association; documents identifying the expansion of women’s athletic programs at Miami University; and a small, but select collection of original photographs of athletes and athletics staff up through the mid-1980s. Of key importance is an original January 1959 article, very likely written by Bob Kurz, which ends with the phrase, “mother of highly successful coaches” in referring to the Miami football program. This press release occurs immediately prior to the use of “Cradle of Coaches,” dubbed by Kurz in that same year. Also included is a vast collection of newspaper articles and memorabilia, which documents Miami athletic events and milestones for a greater portion of the 1900s.

Materials in each series/subseries are ordered chronologically, except the Cradle of Coaches Career Research Surveys in Series II, Subseries VII, Folder II, which are ordered alphabetically by name.

PROVENANCE OF THE COLLECTION

Two Miami University alumni from Urbana, Ohio, Gerald Stout ('52), Nick Selvaggio ('88), and Gerald's son, Steve Stout, donated the collection to The Walter Havighurst Special Collections.

ABOUT THE CRADLE OF COACHES

Miami University is recognized as the "Cradle of Coaches" owing to its unrivaled success in producing coaching legends. In 1959, the moniker "Cradle of Coaches" was first used by Bob Kurz, former sports information director at Miami University, as he pondered an article he was writing concerning several past Miami players. He began to think about the many prominent collegiate and professional football coaches of the time who had all been trained through the Miami University football program.

Whether tied to Miami early in their athletic careers as players or as coaches, the school has been the training ground for such athletic dignitaries as: Chester Pittser, Paul Brown, Sid Gillman, Woody Hayes, Bill Arnsparger, George Blackburn, Earl Blaik, Paul Brown, Carm Cozza, Dick Crumb, Paul Dietzel, Weeb Ewbank, Stu Holcom, Bill Mallory, John McVay, Ara Parseghian, John Pont, Bo Schembechler, Richard "Doc" Urich, and Randy Walker.

Soon after the concept of the Cradle had been established, the Cradle expanded to include a formal association with bi-annual meetings, a newsletter, and a large and rapidly growing membership. The association was administered through Miami University in Oxford, Ohio—specifically, through the joint efforts of the Sports Information Office and the Miami Alumni Association.

In later years, the scope of the Cradle was broadened to honor coaching greatness in other Miami athletic programs, adding to an already long list the successes of Walter Alston (baseball), Darrell Hedric (basketball), and Dick Shriver (basketball), to name but a few. The Cradle also came to include leadership and contributions made by Miami graduates in administrative athletic roles.

Bob Kurz used the phrase "Cradle of Coaches" nearly 50 years ago. It caught on quickly then and is still used today when referring to Miami University athletics, particularly its football program.

In paraphrasing past Cradle members, the spirit of the Cradle begins with a focus on fundamentals and a drive for excellence that is instilled into athletes by the coaches at Miami University. It is completed by the passing of that knowledge on to future athletes and coaches.
